Pierre Moncuit

Le Mesnil-sur-Oger, Champagne

Champagne Pierre Moncuit is based in the superb Côte des Blancs village of Le Mesnil-sur-Oger. It is in this famed Grand Cru where the family owns 15 hectares of vines. Today, the estate is under the direction of Pierre’s daughter, Nicole, and her brother Yves. Champagne Pierre Moncuit is a Blanc de Blancs house par excellence, producing several distinct cuvées: Cuvée Hugues de Coulmet from holdings in Sézanne, Moncuit-Délos Grand Cru NV, a vintage-dated Grand Cru, plus an old vines selection produced in exceptional years called “Cuvée Nicole”, all of which are from the Grand Cru of Mesnil-sur-Oger. These are classic, racy Blanc de Blancs from one of Champagne’s finest villages.

Moutard

Buxeuil, Champagne

The families of Champagne Moutard-Diligent have been living in the village of Buxeuil since the mid-17th century and have a long tradition of both grape growing and wine production. Located in the Côte des Bar, the vineyard soils are made up of clay and limestone, lending a good depth of fruit with fine underlying minerality. The wines are vinified in a traditional manner and emerge from the cellars with lovely aromas and red fruit tones, with a supple texture and lingering finish. Champagnes are cellar-aged for at least three years for non-vintage wines, and up to ten to fifteen years for vintage wines. Moutard also makes a small cuvée called “6 Cépages,” made of equal parts Chardonnay, Pinot Noir, Pinot Meunier, plus the rare Champagne varieties of Arbane, Petit Meslier, and Pinot Blanc; it is aged in neutral wood.

R.H. Coutier

Ambonnay, Montagne de Reims

Practicing Organic

Champagne R. H. Coutier was founded in 1619 and is located in the fine grand cru village of Ambonnay in the Montagne de Reims, where the Coutiers own nine hectares of vineyards and extraordinary chalk caves. Nathalie and Rene's son Antoine has joined them at the domaine and will continue the centuries old family tradition. Although Ambonnay is generally regarded as Pinot Noir country, the Coutiers were pioneers and planted one-third Chardonnay and two-thirds Pinot Noir. The resulting wines display the power of Ambonnay Pinot combined with the freshness and aromatic lift from the Chardonnay - a fine combo indeed!

Gatinois

Äy, Champagne

The boutique Champagne house of Gatinois is located in the lovely village of Äy in the Vallée de la Marne. Äy is one of the most important villages in all of Champagne. Its south-facing slopes and limestone soils give the wines both power and freshness, and make it one of the very top sources for Pinot Noir in the region. In fact, the vineyards are all ranked as Grand Cru. The current head of the house, Pierre Cheval-Gatinois, has now been joined by his son, Louis, who oversees about 7 hectares of family-owned vineyards in Äy. The family continues to sell a portion of their crop to the Grande Marques, particularly Bollinger, but with each passing year they are bottling more of their own production. Pierre and Louis are very much the Champenois traditionalists (with family dating back 11 generations as vignerons in the region!), and have spoken out repeatedly about the potential pitfalls of using new oak in the fermentation and élevage of Champagne. The still wines are all fermented and aged in tank.

Collovray & Terrier

Languedoc, France

Jean-Luc Terrier and Christian Collovray were childhood friends from the village of Davayé in the Mâcon. Not only did they go into business together as the owners of Domaine des Deux Roches, but they also married sisters. They have branched out beyond the reaches of the Mâcon to the 125 acre Domaine Antugnac, located 50 kilometers south of Carcassonne in the foothills of the Pyrenées. With a slightly cooler climate and Chardonnay vines averaging 30 years of age, Antugnac produces magnificent value wines with finesse and crisp acidity. The domaine's Pinot Noir vines are up to 30 years of age. The wine from these vines is aged 8-10 months in barrel and produces a full, silky Pinot Noir with beautiful persistence. Jean-Luc and Christian also produce wines in the Mâcon under their own label, Collovray et Terrier, as well as other projects. One such project, Bourcier-Martinot, is made especially for Polaner and is a selection of some of the top Mâcon AOC vineyards surrounding Saint-Véran and Pouilly-Fuissé.

Goisot

Saint Bris, Burgundy

Certified Biodynamic

From an historic perspective, Domaine Goisot could really be thought of as a fine Chablis estate. But history has not been particularly kind to the region, as Saint Bris was removed from the Chablis appellation after phylloxera ripped through the area in the late nineteenth century. Jean-Hughes Goisot and his wife Ghislaine, along with their son Guilhem, are tireless workers and perfectionists in the village of Saint-Bris. This terroir, which shares the famous chalky soil and the cool northerly climate that is typical of its close neighbor Chablis, gives the wines a very distinctive character: more refined, firmer, more mineral, and often more thirst quenching than wines from farther south in Burgundy. The Goisots plant all of their Sauvignon vines on the cooler north-facing slopes on extremely chalky Kimmeridgian soil (the great classic soil of Chablis). The estate is certified biodynamic and is reputed as one of the leaders in sustainable farming in the region.

Isabelle & Denis Pommier

Chablis, Burgundy

Certified Organic (in conversion)

The estate of Isabelle and Denis Pommier was founded in 1990 when the Pommiers, a young couple at the time, took over two hectares of family land in the village of Poinchy in order to produce their own wine. The estate now spans 16 hectares of vineyards with appellations ranging from Petit Chablis all the way up to three Chablis Premiers Crus including Fourchaume, Côte de Lechet and Beauroy. Since the beginning, there has always been a strong respect for the land and unique terroir of the region. Emboldened by the qualitative gains resulting from plowing the soils and working more naturally in the vineyards, the Pommiers are now fully organic in their Premier Crus and in conversion for the rest of the holdings. The wines from this area tend to be ever so slightly more generous on the palate in terms of power and amplitude, but with a clear line of briny mineral and acid cut that screams “Chablis”, unmistakably.

Fontaine-Gagnard

Chassagne, Burgundy

Domaine Fontaine-Gagnard is one of the finest and most important producers in the village of Chassagne-Montrachet. The domaine has its origin in the fine Gagnard-Delagrange holdings, and was formed in 1982 following the marriage of Richard Fontaine to Jacques Gagnard’s oldest daughter, Laurence. The Gagnard family has always been very closely-knit, and much of the vineyard work amongst the various branches of the family continues to be done together. Today, Richard’s daughter Céline holds the reigns of this prominent property. The heart and soul of Domaine Fontaine-Gagnard are their Chassagne-Montrachets, of which they own a fine clutch of premier crus plus vines in the grand crus of Criots-Bâtard-Montrachet, Bâtard-Montrachet and Montrachet itself. All in all, Domaine Fontaine-Gagnard is one of the very best in Chassagne-Montrachet and a consistently excellent source of classically-styled white Burgundy.

Jean-Louis Dutraive

Fleurie, Beaujolais

Certified Organic

The estate of Domaine de la Grand’Cour dates back to 1969 when it was purchased by Jean Dutraive, making it one of the oldest in the village of Fleurie. Jean Dutraive was joined by his son and fifth generation vigneron, Jean-Louis, in 1977, and by 1989 the reins were fully in Jean-Louis’ capable hands. Clos de la Grand’Cour is a true clos – a walled vineyard – and is a monopole. The average age of the vines is around 40-50 years, with a good chunk over 70 years old. Jean-Louis is a devout practitioner of organic viticulture and the property has been certified by ECOCERT since 2009. Harvest is done by hand, wines ferment naturally, with no de-stemming, only indigenous yeast, and minimal SO2 is added during the élevage. The wines of Jean-Louis Dutraive are some of the most aromatically and texturally compelling wines in all of Beaujolais. One whiff and the wines display an almost exotic floral and spicy aroma over lush minerally Gamay fruit. These are substantial Beaujolais, reminiscent of Beaune Premier Crus, and they evolve well over 10-15 years of ageing.

Antoine Lienhardt

Gevrey, Burgundy

Antoine Lienhardt and Juliette Joblot – of the Givry Joblots – are clearly rising stars and humble overachievers in the appellation of Cote de Nuits-Villages. The couple, both in life and in the vineyards, started their project with the 2011 vintage when they took over 4.2 Hectares of vineyards planted by Antoine’s grandfather in the 1960s. He truly believes in his terroirs and views the vineyards of Comblanchien as being hugely undervalued. He is convinced that if they were to ever re-classify the hierarchy of Burgundy, there would certainly be Premier Cru if not Grand Cru vineyards amongst the village’s choicest sectors. In the vineyards, pruning is severe and great attention is paid to harvest fruit that is physiologically ripe but also maintains an energy and vibrancy. The wines age in barrel for 12 months, and are bottled to capture the purity and exuberance of the fruit. We are captivated by the drive and energy in the wines and are thrilled to be bringing them to our market.

Trapet

Gevrey, Burgundy
Certified Biodynamic

Domaine Trapet Père et Fils is one of the greatest estates of Gevrey-Chambertin, with superb holdings in three of the most historic top grand crus in the village and a legacy of great wines that dates back to their earliest days of estate bottling. While the family has been important vineyard owners in Gevrey-Chambertin since 1870, it was not until the 1960s that they began to bottle a majority of their production and offer their wines directly for sale to clients. Previously they had been one of the finest sources for top négociants in the region, including Maison Leroy and Maison Joseph Drouhin. The style of wines at Trapet can only be described as hauntingly elegant, with deep, pure, resonant flavors, fine tannins, and a long energetic presence on the palate (helped by moderate use of new oak and deft use of stems).

Domaine du Haut Bourg

Muscadet, France

Located southeast of Nantes in the heart of the Muscadet appellation “Côtes de Grandlieu”, the Domaine du Haut Bourg was built by four generations of winegrowers. The first vine was planted in 1945 and today brothers Hervé and Nicolas Choblet run their 40 hectares estate together. The Lac de Grandlieu is the largest natural lake in Europe and creates a distinct microclimate characterized by moderated temperatures in winter, and overall, a lower temperature gradient between day and night. This phenomenon allows an earlier harvest that helps retain the generous acids typical of Muscadet. The sun’s daily heat is soaked up, which enables the wine crop to ripen a little longer while avoiding frost. The vines average 30 years of age, with some vines as old as 60 years. The Choblet brothers plant densely at 7,000 vines per hectare and are committed to farming sustainably. These are classic Muscadets—bracing, salty, racy, and seriously lip-smacking.

Domaine de l'Ecu

Muscadet, Loire

Certified Biodynamic

For many years, under the guidance of the talented Guy Bossard (now together with the new current proprietor Frederick Niger Van Herck), this domaine has held its place in the top echelon of producers in Muscadet. The estate was also one of the early practitioners of organic viticulture, well before it was fashionable to do so, and has been certified Organic for over 40 years and certified Biodynamic for over 20. Bossard is fanatic in the vineyards, crops extremely low, and produces Muscadets that have remarkable depth, precision, as well as ageability. Unlike most regular Muscadet, the wines are aged sur-lie for around 15 months. The estate produces three different “flagship” Muscadets, each crafted from different subsoils of the region: Gneiss, Orthogneiss and Granite.

Domaine des Vieux Pruniers

Sancerre, Loire

Domaine des Vieux Pruniers is situated a mere 2.5 miles from Sancerre, in the village of Bué, known for its chalky soils and steep, amphitheater-like vineyards, some approaching 65° gradients. Today, Christian Thirot-Fournier and his wife tend to their roughly 10 hectares of vines, divided between two varieties: 7 hectares of Sauvignon Blanc planted to chalky limestone soils and 3 hectares of Pinot Noir grown on clay-limestone. Together they raise the wine from vine to bottle. They are moving towards a more “sustainable” viticultural regime, which is an admirable commitment in such an inhospitable growing climate. The wine is 100% tank-fermented. After several months aging on its fine lees, it is fined, filtered and bottled at the domaine. This is a clear, mineral, citrusy, racy style of Sancerre.

Foucher-Lebrun & Chais St LaurentLoire Valley, France

Foucher-Lebrun is a “Petit Négociant” founded in 1921 specializing in wines from the Loire Valley. The company’s mission is to produce excellent expressions of the classic appellations in the Loire region through careful vineyard selection, vinification and proper ageing. Today, Parisian wine broker Jean Mounard passionately oversees the selection process for the winery. With his deep experience tasting the great wines of the world (he deals regularly in such luminaries as DRC, Mouton, Domaine Leflaive, etc), as well as his contacts among top producers in the Loire, he has significantly raised the bar in terms of the quality of these value-driven wines. By tapping into connections at some better quality cellars in the region, Foucher-Lebrun is able to create wines that display a real sense of their underlying appellations and are made with a balance and delineation rarely found in wines at this price point.

Château du HureauSaumur-Champigny, Loire

Practicing Organic (in conversion)

Château du Hureau is considered one of the top producers in Saumur-Champigny. Over the past few years, they have been moving in a more natural direction in their viticulture, and are in official organic conversion as of the 2010 vintage. They also hand-harvest and use natural yeasts on all their cuvées. These are dark, intense and sappy Cabernet Francs, with plenty of lovely fruit, balanced by acidity and minerality from the underlying tuffe soils.

Domaine Aux Moines

Savennières, Loire

Practicing Organic (in conversion)

The Domaine aux Moines estate was founded in 1981, though there are records of vineyards planted in the region since the middle ages when the monks (“moines” in French) from the Abbaye de St Nicolas tended vines. It is now run by the energetic mother and daughter team of Monique and Tessa Laroche. The 9.6 hectares of Chenin Blanc are all planted on south and southwest facing hillsides overlooking the Loire River in the sub-appellation of "Savennières - Roche Aux Moines", adjacent to the famed Coulée de Serrant. The soils in the area are predominantly schist with some sandstone and clay. They tend to produce a flinty, drier style Chenin Blanc that can age for a long time, which is certainly the case for this estate. The Laroche ladies employ a natural approach in their vineyard work and cellar practices, and full organic certification will be achieved in the 2014 vintage. The wines are all fermented with indigenous yeasts, and aged in a combination of tank and cask. The winery also stocks vintages for sale back almost 20 years!

Moulin Touchais

Coteaux du Layon, Loire

This is an historic property and a true hidden gem! The Touchais family has owned vineyards and produced Coteaux-du-Layon wines since the 18th century. While the domaine produces a great number of wines from their 145 hectares of vineyards, the Coteaux du Layon accounts for less than 10% of their production. Their winemaking today is deeply rooted in these traditional techniques. The sweet Chenin Blancs they produce are more a result of extremely ripe grapes and natural drying on the vine, called passerillage, rather than desiccation due to botrytis. Following the local tradition, the wine is fermented in cement vats and bottled early the following spring. The bottles are then aged in the estate’s cellar for at least 10 years prior to being released. The wines have an amazing track record for longevity and can last 50-100 years in the great vintages. We are gifted with access to an array of vintages, dating back to the early 1970s. Not only are these memorable wines a joy to follow throughout their evolution, they are exceptionally well priced for their pedigree.

Isle Saint-Pierre

Rhone, France

Practicing Organic

We discovered the Isle Saint Pierre wines through our friends Karina and Guillaume Lefevre of Domaine du Sulauze. Isle Saint-Pierre is a small island in the middle of the Rhône river, located 25km south of Arles and 15km away from the Mediterranean in the heart of the Camargue region. In 1927, Parisian wine merchant Pierre Chassaing founded Domaine Isle Saint-Pierre and devoted himself to cultivating vines and raising sheep. The proximity to the water means that the island enjoys a coastal climate (with a cooling influence from the nearby bodies of water) and deep, well draining sedimentary soils comprised of sand and silt. For red wines as well as for the rosé, the main varieties are Merlot, Cabernet Franc, Petit Verdot and Arinarnoa (a cross between merlot and petit verdot). The white wines are made from Chardonnay, Sauvignon and Muscat. Although the Isle Saint-Pierre wines come from the very southern stretches of France, they display wonderful freshness and aromatic appeal. They are our answer to lively, vibrant quaffers that over deliver at every turn.

Domaine de Sulauze

Provence, France

Certified Organic & Practicing Biodynamic

Karina and Guillaume Lefèvre are two of the loveliest and most warm-spirited people you would ever meet. He is from Marseille and she from Brazil. They purchased this property in Côteaux d'Aix en Provence in 2004 and began immediately converting the 37 hectares of vineyards into organic viticulture. They are now certified organic and are also incorporating biodynamic practices into their vineyard work, including the production of most of their own Biodynamic preps. Their rosé is fermented for 20 days in temperature-controlled tanks with indigenous yeasts. They add very low doses of SO2, and bottle the wine without filtration. The color is classic pale, pink/salmon, with aromatics that are bright and clear, and notes of citrus (especially blood orange), lavender and minerals. The reds are juicy and lively with great fruit concentration and nuance. This estate has truly come into its own in recent years and the wines deserve every bit of the praise they have garnered.

Mas de Daumas Gassac

Languedoc, France

Practicing Organic

For many, this estate needs no introduction. Often referred to as the Grand Cru of the Midi (South of France), the Mas de Daumas Gassac top-tier wines have reached international cult status for their unusual blends and their potential for long-term aging. Located in the majestic Gassac Valley, the estate benefits from the cool microclimate derived from the Gassac River, several natural springs (from which the Guibert family drinks), and the influence of the nearby mountains. The soil that dominates the valley is a rare and still unexplained red, powder-fine glacial soil, which is strikingly similar to that found in the prime areas of Burgundy. This combination of characteristics is quite unique in Southern France and enabled the family to plant 40 different grape varieties in the valley. In the 1990s, the Guibert family began producing a line of aromatic, full flavored wines under the Moulin de Gassac label.

Domaine Saint-Ser

Provence, France

Practicing Organic

The Domaine Saint-Ser is from the sub-appellation of the Côtes de Provence called “Sainte Victoire”. Containing only 30 producers, this small region represents only 14% of the total Côtes de Provence appellation and is considered a privileged area for wine production. The vineyards, along the edge of the Sainte Victoire Mountains, are at an average elevation of 400 meters and have extremely rocky soils with clay and limestone. The luminosity here favors photosynthesis, which increases the concentration of the grape clusters. There is also a collective philosophy of sustainable viticulture for the sub-zone that forbids the use of chemical additives in the vineyards.

Domaine de Piaugier

Rhône, France

Practicing Organic

Sophie and Jean-Marc Autran cultivate 3.5 hectares within the Gigondas AOC, 12.5 hectares in the Sablet AOC, and 14 hectares of Côtes du Rhône vineyards. For a village that takes its name from the French word for sand (Sablet), the Autran’s also have a uniquely high percentage of clay in their vineyards, which they believe gives power and concentration to their wines. A further advantage is that the vines themselves, which are 20 – 40 years old, and reaching their prime. The grapes are hand-harvested and fermented with indigenous yeasts in concrete tanks. The wines are aged in a combination of concrete tanks, as well as a mixture of small and large barrels (mostly used wood). These are high quality Rhône wines created with great passion and intelligence.

Châteaux D'Arveyres & Cantelaudette

Bordeaux, France

A refuge for monks in the 16th century, Château d'Arveyres (previously known as Château Fantin) vines have been in the Houbaer family since 1890. Current owner Jean-Michel Chatelier is the great-grandson on the maternal side of the family. On the steep slopes overlooking the Dordogne River, the vineyard of Château d'Arveyres faces south and south-east, towards the medieval town of Saint-Emilion. The slopes and sandy soils provide good drainage and keep the soil from compacting. A good, sunny exposure and the beneficial influence of the Dordogne River ensure that the grapes ripen evenly. Chatelier also owns an estate in the satellite region of Graves des Veyres called Château Cantelaudette. The area near the village of Veyres is known for its gravelly soils which impart a fine minerality to the wines (“Baby Graves”).

Châteaux Sainte-Marie & Péyredon

Bordeaux, France

Certified Organic

Set right in the heart of the Entre-Deux-Mers region, Chateau Sainte Marie was established in 1956. The south-facing vineyards stretch over two very sunny hilltops which are among the highest points in the Gironde region. Dupuch and his son Stéphane have spent considerable energy – to no real avail – trying to convince their colleagues that the future of the appellation will be found through denser vine planting, lower yields and natural vineyard management. They are one of the few estates in Bordeaux to be certified Organic. Marked by freshness, vitality and length, Chateau Sainte Marie wines have become staples and go-to values in our Bordeaux portfolio. Stéphane and his wife recently purchased a small estate in the Haut Médoc named Château Péyredon. Their debut release was 2009 and we are delighted to now be featuring the recently released 2011 vintage.

Domaines Bouyer

Bordeaux, France

Practicing Organic (in conversion)

In the capable hands of Alexia and Pierre Bouyer, the estates of Clos de la Cure and Chateau Milon represent more than seven generations of viticultural heritage. While the average vine age is 30 years, it is believed that vines were planted on these plateaus in the Middle Ages. The vineyards share the same soil composition as Château Cheval Blanc – gravel and clay with iron-rich deposits – and they are densely planted at 6600-9000 vines per hectare. The Bouyer family is committed to farming ecologically with great respect for the Grand Cru terroir of Clos de la Cure. This Merlot dominated Château Milon Cuvée Caprice is an astonishing value and established itself early on as a crowd-favorite in the appellation of Saint-Emilion.

La Posta

Mendoza, Argentina

At La Posta del Vinatero, or “tavern of the grape grower” a handful of growers converge to drink wine and speak passionately about their soils, their vines, and their quest for superior flavors in their grapes. La Posta is made solely from these growers’ special grapes, and these vineyard-designated releases are a salute to their hard work and skill.

Luca

Mendoza, Argentina

Laura Catena, daughter of Argentine wine pioneer Nicolás Catena, has a vision of creating a new breed of Argentine wines: small quantities, artisan quality, and true to their individual terroirs. She starts with some of Argentina’s best fruit from low-yield, high elevation vineyards. The end result are her stunning range of Luca wines which are the ultimate expression of rigorous vineyard management, viticultural experimentation, strict irrigation controls, skilled winemaking, and a quest for quality at any cost.

Mendel

Mendoza, Argentina

Proprietor and longtime wine lover, Anabelle Sielecki, diligently tracked down the very best talent Argentina had to offer when seeking a winemaker for her Mendel estate. With charm and perseverance, she enlisted one of Argentina’s most talented veterans, Roberto de la Mota. Roberto, son of legendary winemaker Raul de la Mota, has an impressive winemaking record – both in Argentina and also in Bordeaux - and a lifetime of winemaking education and practice. Together, they choose the best blocks from their ancient ungrafted vineyards, and every artisan winemaking step is rigorously performed.

Tikal is owned by Ernesto Catena, son of Argentine wine pioneer Nicolas Catena. There are few wine brands that reflect the sensibilities of their owner more than Tikal. A skilled horseman, fashion designer, software developer, and book editor, Ernesto pursues all that gives pleasure in life. This hedonism (in the best sense of the word) shows through in the wines. It is a style meant to provide enormous pleasure rather than provoke contemplation.

Bohigas

Catalunya, Spain

Practicing Organic (in conversion)

Fermí Bohigas is a family-owned winery that has roots dating back to the 13th century. The estate is located in the town of Òdena in the River Anoia valley, about 45 minutes west of Barcelona. The current family and their ancestors have been growing grapes and making wines at this location consecutively since 1290. Their first bottling took place in 1870 although it was not until 1978 that the name “Bohigas” appeared on a wine label. Today, the family’s estate, under the guidance of Jordi Casanovas Bohigas, encompasses 300 hectares of which 110 are split between two separate vineyard properties, named “Can Macià” and “Can Batllellé”, both of which have their own cellars. The house style of the Cavas here is fresh and riveting, with fine bubbles and low dosage levels to accentuate the purity of the fruit. The winery also farms organically, and is now in conversion for official certification.

La Val

Riax Baixas, Spain

Bodegas La Val was established in 1985 and was one of the first wineries in Rias Baixas. Unusual for the area, La Val produces its wines solely from their estate grown grapes rather than buying from local growers. They own 150 acres of Albariño most of which are located in the Condado do Tea sub-region. The vineyards are trained in the pergola system which, in this very humid and rainy climate, allows for better air flow and ripening. The particular micro-climate of their main holding in Condado do Tea allows them to be the first winery to open the harvest, which is typically in the first half of September. Jose Maria Ureta, the current winemaker, is extremely well respected in the D.O. and considered to be one of the young up-and-comers.

Lurra

Navarra, Spain

Lurra or “terroir” in Basque comes from the appellation of Navarra in the heart of the Basque Country and sheep country - hence the label! This region is located in the northeast of Spain and lies in between Rioja and the French border. The region is quite large and spans from the areas close to the Atlantic, where it is very cool, to the south, where it is more continental in climate. The Garnacha vineyards for Lurra are from the southern section where it is warmer but also fairly high in altitude about 1,300 feet on average. The soils here are a combination of chalk and clay. The Lurra Garnacha is made very simply in stainless steel and sees no oak aging so that it is a pure expression of its terroir.

Temperamento

Utiel-Requena, Spain

Practicing Organic

Temperamento is made from the Bobal grape grown in Utiel-Requena. The D.O. of Utiel-Requena is located in Valencia in south eastern Spain. This area has a very warm Mediterranean climate, but the vineyards here are moderated by high altitudes. Bobal is the indigenous grape to this area and can be a very challenging variety to grow. Its vigor must be curbed in order to produce quality wines. Bodegas Sierra Norte, which makes Temperamento, has very old vines of Bobal (many exceeding 60 years of age) that it farms organically near the town of Camporrobles.

Algueira

Ribeira Sacra, Spain

Practicing Organic & Biodynamic

The Algueira winery is located in the midst of old chestnut and oak tree forests, on the banks of the river sil, where monks built their monasteries back in the 12th century. The vineyards are on very steep inclines and planted on terraces made from pure schist soils, much like Cote-Rotie or the Mosel. The schistsoils, steep inclines, and tempering effects of the river provide the perfect micro climate for producing truly special and unique wines.

Practicing Organic

There is a revolution happening in the Douro, and Dirk Niepoort is leading the troops. For centuries this part of Portugal has been known only for its port, but today, many of these Portuguese wine-makers are beginning to make red table wines with the same grapes that have traditionally only been used for ports.

At the helm of the Niepoort house since 1987, Dirk has transformed his family's company and has had a tremendous impact in helping transform the entire region.

Bodegas Tradicion

Jerez, Spain

Bodegas Tradicion is one of the most exciting, yet under-the-radar producers in the Sherry zone. While the Bodega is fairly young, founded in 1998, it focuses exclusively on the rarest of all Sherry categories: old wines with classifications of VOS (20 years minimum) or VORS (30 years minimum) and the even rarer class of Añadas, or Vintage, wines with more than 20 years of age. Tradicion was created by Joaquin Rivero, a descendant of one of the most historic and important families in the Sherry business. The oldest recorded bodega in Jerez is in fact “Bodega CZ, J.M. Rivero” tracing its business back to 1695. In 1991, the Rivero family sold that bodega and business. It is unusual in Jerez to have a bodega focused only on old wines – treasures of a historic appellation and with long aging – and this is especially true for a young winery founded in only 1998! In fact, though, the best is yet to come, as the bodega continues to refine and age over time, and to further amass the finest, oldest and rarest treasures of this great region.

La Crotta di Vegneron

Valle d'Aoste, Italy

The vineyards at La Crotta are steep, south-facing vineyards pasted to the sides of the mountains that soar above them here in the remote Valle D'Aosta. The vines grow between 450 and 1050 meters in altitude in soils formed from millions of years of glacial runoff. These soils are very mineral and are composed largely of rocks and sand, lending a strong underlying minerality to the wines. The winemaking philosophy is one that respects and showcases the traditional appellations and indigenous grapes. Although there is some barrel-aging employed with some of the wines, new oak is kept to a bare minimum. The grapes are all hand-harvested and the red wines are fermented with natural yeasts to help emphasize their individual expression.

Cantalupo

Piedmont, Italy

Though this winery was only built in 1977, the Arlunno family has been cultivating vineyards in Ghemme, in northern Piedmont, for many generations. The vineyards of Cantalupo are situated in the hills above the town of Ghemme, referred to in Roman times as Agamium. Today, Alberto Arlunno manages this estate, assisted by renowned consulting winemaker Donato Lanati. Ghemme by law must be at least 75% Nebbiolo, known in the region as “Spanna”, but the Arlunno family prefers to highlight the quality of their vineyards by bottling only 100% Nebbiolo wines. The rocky, mineral soils here were formed by the glacial runoff of Monte Rosa, and impart an underlying minerality to the wines. This, combined with traditional Piedmontese winemaking, with relatively long macerations and aging in botti, make for some beautiful and age-worthy Nebbiolo that could easily hold its own with Ghemme’s more “high rent” neighbors further south in the Langhe.

Cascina Delle Rose

Piedmont, Italy

Practicing Organic

Cascina delle Rose is located in the Rio Sordo Valley in Barbaresco. This tiny, 3 hectare gem of an estate is run by Giovanna Rizzolio and Italo Sobrino and their sons, Davide and Riccardo. As its name suggests, roses are indeed omnipresent on the farm and in the vineyards. It has been a family-run business since 1948, but they only bottled and sold under the Cascina delle Rose label after Giovanna took over in 1992. Their small production focuses on Barbaresco from both the clay soils of the vineyard Rio Sordo, and also from the calcareous soils of the Tre Stelle vineyard. These steep hillside vineyards are all painstakingly worked by hand. Grapes are harvested manually, de-stemmed, and fermented with natural yeasts. The wines are then aged for 24-30 months in large, old botti grandi. The result: some of the most stunningly elegant and perfumed Barbareschi we’ve ever tasted.

We have been fortunate enough to taste these wines back to the 1982 vintage, and clearly, this Barbera has the structure and power to last. Barbera doesn’t get more exciting than this!

Tratturi

Puglia, Italy

Tratturi is the word for the ancient drovers trails in the countryside of Puglia that shepherds used in the old days to bring their flocks of sheep and other animals down from the mountains in autumn. This countryside of Puglia, specifically the subzone of Salento, is the source of this bold, spicy, and delicious Primitivo. Primitivo is said to be related to the Zinfandel grape which many old Italian immigrants planted in Northern California in the late 19th and early 20th century. The background of the label is made up of Trulli houses, which dot the countryside in Puglia. The wine was aged entirely in tank. Its round, spicy profile is a perfect match for pasta, pizza, or anything off the BBQ.

Muri-Gries

Alto Adige, Italy

Practicing Organic

In 1845, Benedictine monks coming from the monastery of Muri in Switzerland took over the abandoned Canons Monastery of the Gries (in Italy), and from then on, the monastery was known as Muri-Gries. Since 1947, the Muri-Gries Monastery’s winery has produced wines in the DOC of Alto Adige, which are sold in Italy and abroad. Winemaker Christian Werth was one of the first in the area to focus on Lagrein, restructuring the old vineyards and experimenting in the cellar with fantastic results. They are now considered a benchmark producer of this fascinating, indigenous variety. The wines of this ancient monastery represent intense varietal purity coupled with great value.

Ciro Picariello has quickly become one of the star producers of Fiano di Avellino. He and his wife started their winery in 1997 although their first vintage under their own label was not until 2004. Their 7 hectares of vineyards are located at relatively high elevation in the province of Campania; the vineyards are divided between the villages of Montefredane (1,600 feet above sea level) and Summonte (2,100 feet). The harvest for the Fiano occurs in late October, very late for white wine. The wines are fermented with indigenous yeasts in stainless tanks. The Fiano di Avellino is aged on its fine lees for an extended period between 11-12 months (plus several months more in bottle before release), with the Irpinia Fiano and reds slightly shorter, 7-8 months. Use of SO2 is minimal; the wines are not filtered or fined.

Ocone

Campania, Italy

Certified Organic

The Ocone Estate lies in the province of Benevento in the Campania region of Italy. In this very rocky, mountainous area, some 40 miles east of Naples, Domenico Ocone produces several of Italy’s most original and compelling wines from the local varieties: Aglianico, Coda di Volpe, Falanghina and Greco. They flourish in Ocone’s biodynamically farmed vineyards. The winery is a member of the Italian Association for Organic Farming (AIAB). The only fertilizer used is natural, and no pesticides or additives of any kind, including sulphur dioxide, are employed in the winemaking process (a tiny addition at bottling only). Certainly, such natural viticulture practices are not common in Ocone’s part of Italy. The wines are stellar examples of their variety, especially at their pricepoint.

Cantina Lonardo

Campania, Italy

Practicing Organic (in conversion)

This property only began producing estate-bottled wines in 1998, before which the grapes were sold to the cooperative. Their philosophy is one of “enlightened traditionalism”: macerations are long (30 to 60 days) and aging is done in 600-liter tonneaux, with only a small percentage of new wood so as to not mask the aromas of the wines. The resulting wines are pure expressions of Aglianico, in an old and soulful sense. They are big, deep, powerful and tannic, and unabashedly so. Recent additions to their lineup are the two cru’s, Coste (from clay and limestone soil) and Vigne d’Alto (from volcanic soil) prove that Taurasi should be in the conversation with Barolo and Brunello as one of the greatest wines of Italy. Production is small but these wines are well worth your seeking out.

Emidio Pepe

Abruzzo, Italy

Practicing Biodynamic

While the wines of Abruzzo are best known in this country for mass-produced versions of Montepulciano d'Abruzzo, Emidio Pepe is a singular producer creating amazingly complex age-worthy reds and whites. The winemaking has remained unchanged philosophically since Emidio Pepe took over the estate in 1964. Grapes are grown biodynamically, hand-harvested, hand-destemmed, naturally fermented and aged 18-24 months in glass-lined tanks. The wines are bottled unfined and unfiltered, without added SO2, and left to develop in the cellar. An extensive stock of older vintages is kept in the cellar. Before release, the wines are decanted into new bottles and labeled by hand.

Castell'in Villa

Tuscany, Italy

This historic winery, run by Proprietress Principessa Coralia Pignatelli della Leonessa is known for producing some of the most traditionally-crafted, age-worthy wines in the appellation. The 298 hectare estate (with a modest 54 hectares of vineyards) sits atop a hill in Castelnuovo Berardenga. Most of its vineyards are on the south facing sides of the hill – with olive groves and forest interspersed throughout.

Stylistically, the wines are classic, elegant and traditional. The Chiantis, even the “current” releases, are held back in bottle to give added complexity and refinement. The wines display classic aromas and flavors of dried fruits and flowers, minerals and a dusty/earthy core that is uniquely Tuscan. There is an energy and lift to all the wines with well-integrated acidity and balanced structure.

Rodano

Tuscany, Italy

Practicing Organic

Rodano is located in the heart of Chianti Classico in the famed village of Castellina. Their pristine, organically-farmed vineyard holdings (spread over 100 hectares) are located 200-300 meters above sea level and have been in the family since the 1700s. The pride and joy of the property is their Viacosta vineyard, a perfect south-facing amphitheater vineyard which provides the fruit for the estate’s superb Riserva Viacosta, made only in the best of vintages. The wines are aged primarily in traditional botti grandi. The result is wine with new-world purity and old-world soul. Not to be missed are the estate’s terrific value bottlings, Poggialupi, a satisfying blend of Sangiovese with a touch of Merlot, and their terrific old-world style Chianti Classico.

La Berta

Veneto, Italy

Practicing Organic & Biodynamic

The Poggiali family, owners of the Fattoria di Felsina winery since the 1960’s, are originally from Ravenna in Emilia-Romagna. They have had the intention for some time of having a winery in their native land. That dream was finally realized in 2009 when they bought Podere La Berta in the town of Brisighella.

The vineyards at La Berta are farmed with the same care and attention as those at Fattoria di Felsina. They are farmed with minimal impact. They practice biodynamic farming methods but do not plan to be certified. The soil here is a mix of clay and sand rich in marine deposit. The vineyards sit in a choice position in the foothills of the Appenine Mountains with influence from the Adriatic as well.

Fèlsina is one of the great estates in Tuscany and one of the most famous properties in all of Italy. The winery was founded in 1966, though it didn't start bottling under the Fèlsina label until the early '80's. The property is composed of 11 farmhouses (poderi) of medieval origin, each one characterized by a single vineyard. Unlike most other top estates in the region, Fèlsina's Chianti Classicos as well as their IGT, Fontalloro, are all based on the purity, sanctity and complexity of Sangiovese in mono-uvaggio. Felsina practices biodynamic vineyard management but they do not intend to be certified.

Stella di Campalto

Montalcino, Tuscany

Certified Biodynamic

Stella di Campalto is a dynamic winemaker whose wines reflect her charm and character. In 1992, her family took over the abandoned San Giuseppe winery, located south of the town of Montalcino. The estate extends across 13.45 hectares of land with a mix of woods, olive groves (planted in 1920) and 5.5 hectares of vineyards in the Castelnuovo dell'Abate area. Once restored, these vineyards were certified organic in 1996 and the winery became certified biodynamic in 2005. The cellar complex is on three levels and completely gravity fed. The wines are aged in a combination of small botti and tonneaux, mostly used. These are wonderfully complex, textured, and pure elixirs that belong among Montalcino's most illustrious bottlings.

Salicutti

Certified Organic

Podere Salicutti is a gem of an estate located in Montalcino and one of the leading figures in the tiny, yet burgeoning “Natural Wine” movement in the Brunello appellation. It is run meticulously by Francesco Leanza who left his career as a chemical engineer in Rome to dedicate himself full-time to Podere Salicutti in 1995. Leanza originally purchased the property in 1990 and immediately began reviving the olive grove and renovating the building on the estate. A few years later, he set out to revive the vineyards, which he had begun replanting in 1994. Today, the winery produces a graceful style of Brunello di Montalcino.

The roots of wine production in Conero (located in the middle of the Marche) date back to the 10th century BC, during the Etruscan period. Compared to that, the Malacari family's 500 years in the region seems rather brief. The family produces wine from their 16 hectares of Montepulciano vineyards in the town of Offagna, known for its sandy and limestone soil.

This botti-aged Rosso Conero has an intense ruby red color with red fruit fragrances of blackberries and cherries, and spiced and balsamic notes.

Domaine Huet

Vouvray, Loire

Certified Biodynamic

Domaine Huet is one of the great reference points not only for the Loire Valley, but for France in general. The style of the wines is very precise, mineral-driven Chenin (not to mention age-worthy), whether in the Pétillant, Sec, Demi-Sec or Moelleux style. The Domaine was also one of the early proponents of Biodynamic viticulture and has been certified since the early 1990s. Vinifications occur in a combination of tank and (older) wood, depending on the vintage and vineyard. Bernabeleva

Madrid, Spain

Practicing Organic & Biodynamic

Bernabeleva is located in the ancient Celtic hunting grounds marked with stone bears North and West of Madrid. The estate is the dream of Vincente Alvarez-Villamil, who purchased the land in 1926. It took until 2006, when his two great grand children brought that dream to reality. The estate’s vineyards are now 84 years old and planted to Garnacha and Albillo in the best sub zone of the Vinos de Madrid DO known as San Martin de Valdeiglesias. In this location, the soils are very poor – made up of decomposed granite – and at very high altitudes. These heights create very large diurnal temperature shifts and allow for very ripe yet fresh and elegant Garnacha. The vines and wines are looked after with great care by one of the young up and coming winemakers in Spain named Marc Isart Pinos. Marc works very responsibly adhering to principles of organics, biodynamics and natural winemaking.

Fichet

Meursault, Burgundy

Perhaps more than any of his peers, Jean-Philippe Fichet is testing the limits of transparency to find the very soul of Meursault's terroirs. He has studied every square inch of earth and stone in all of his parcels in hopes of making Meursault's purest set of single-climat wines. Even if uneconomical, Fichet would rather produce a very small amount of wine from his best sites than to lose their unique character in a blend. While he has remained under the radar until recently, the wines of Jean-Philippe Fichet today have few rivals for their class in Burgundy, and unmatched in their transparency and expressiveness.

Since 1991, René Rostaing has emerged as one of the Northern Rhône’s most respected growers. Between 1991 and 1995, he assumed the vineyards of his uncle, the legendary Marius Gentaz, and his father-in-law, Albert Dervieux. From these two traditionalist titans, he also learned to value the noble qualities of classic Côte Rôtie. The wines are made using a good portion of whole clusters and are aged in mostly used demi-muids and barriques.

Tucked away in the hills of Suvereto near Bolgheri on the Tuscan Coast – one of the hottest areas in Tuscany – is the 15-acre Montepeloso estate. The winemaker, Swiss-born Fabio Chiarello, admits about his wine that it’s “easy to produce concentrated wines in such a hot climate...but it’s much harder to achieve elegance and finesse.” In order to take full advantage of the terroir’s potential, he overhauled the vineyards in 1997 – retraining, pruning, and even regrafting many vines. In the cellar, he does relatively short macerations, employs natural yeasts during fermentation, and bottles without filtration.

Cerbaiona

Tuscany, Italy

Practicing Organic

For the past two decades, the public’s idea of Brunello has increasingly been a modern wine, deeply colored, layered with oak, and delivering flavors not dissimilar to bold red wines from other regions and other countries. But long before Modernism came to Montalcino, Brunello was second only to Barolo as Italy’s most revered wine precisely because it was unlike any other wine in the world — possessing a warm autumnal color, uniquely compelling forest-floor aromas, and an opulent texture of pure velvet, unadorned by flavors of new wood. The more we taste Brunello, the more we understand the wines most deserving of our reverence are those of a handful of surviving traditionalists who continue to make such wines, and to do so at the very highest level. One of the very greatest of these is Diego Molinari’s tiny Cerbaiona estate.

Practicing Organic & Biodynamic

If anyone embodies the promise and spirit of “The New Spain”, it is Alvaro Palacios. Along with Peter Sisseck of Dominio de Pingus, Alvaro is widely considered to be making some of the most important Spanish wines in a generation. Here in the Priorat, the soils are friable schist on steep, terraced slopes. The winery is practicing biodynamic and organic, the grapes are harvested by hand and the wines are not filtered. Les Terrasses is one of the most famous of his wines, and starting in 2007, the wine became “Velles Vinyes” or Old Vines only. This move cut the production of Les Terrasses by about 2/3rds and increased the quality of the wine tremendously.

PSI

Ribera del Duero, Spain

Practicing Organic & Biodynamic

Psi is an Utopian idea, born of Peter Sisseck's passionate belief in organic and biodynamic farming. By changing the economic incentives, and actively engaging the growers' passion for their land, he could obtain the kind of healthy, balanced fruit that he desired, while also helping to augment the health of vineyards throughout the region. Since 2006, Peter has worked with former Alonso y Yerro winemaker, Pablo Rubio to identify the vineyards and growers with the most potential. Their aim is to move these growers towards farming healthier vineyards and getting better fruit. The duo are making available to each grower not only their expertise in organic and biodynamic farming, but also their preparations which are being made locally. They supply technical advice but try to avoid “instructing” proud growers. And, as the quality improves, they are rewarding growers with higher prices for their fruit.

Bussola

Veneto, Italy

Tommaso Bussola took over over his uncle's Valpolicella estate—with its prized old vineyards in the heart of the Classico zone—in the mid-1980's. While vineyard work came naturally to him, he experimented relentlessly, and absorbed information and ideas from every source available. With each passing vintage, his wines came to show more polish, finesse, intensity, and personality. By the late nineties, his style had matured, and his wines had become world-famous for their incredible intensity of fruit. Like other top Veneto winemakers, he uses new barrels, but any hint of new wood is hidden by cascades of lush, opulent fruit.

Rare Wine Historic Series

Madeira, Portugal

The Rare Wine Co. is America's leading importer of great, vintage Madeira. In 2001, Rare Wine created their Historic Series blends to offer something the market had been missing - affordable Madeiras with real vintage character. RWC is buying small lots of old wines on the island and blending to enhance vintage and varietal character. RWC's owner, Mannie Berk, has made a career out of tracking down and importing elusive, ancient, vintage Madeiras — a task made ever more challenging by the slowly diminishing stocks on the island. He is considered by many to be the most authoritative American scholar on the subject of these wines.

Founded in 1820, and today housed in cellars that date from 1619, this small jewel of a company is still owned by the same family, its vineyard holdings built up over time through a series of marriages with other wine-producing families. But what is really extraordinary is that D'Oliveira has held on to many of its most famous vintages, creating a unique, and irreplaceable, stock of old wines. And remarkably they are all D'Oliveira wines, not purchased from other shippers or growers.

Hermanos de Peciña

Ribeira Sacra, Spain

Practicing Organic

Bodegas Hermanos de Peciña is firmly planted in the old school camp. Although the estate was started only in 1992, its founder, Pedro Peciña had worked for over 20 years prior to that as the head agronomist for La Rioja Alta. Their vineyards - many 40 to 60 years old - are actually some of the finest in the appellation as they fall at the foothills of the Sierra Cantabria Mountains at an average of 500 meters, and offer hillside expositions as well as complex and diverse soils. Many of Peciña’s most prized vineyards are also on north facing slopes which Pedro feels helps give the wines good freshness and delineation. The estate comprises 50 hectares, which is fairly small by Rioja standards. All the wines are cask racked every 6 months, with Peciña one of only a few houses that still do the traditional "trasiego" method by hand. Like the best of the traditionalists, the aging regime in both cask and bottle are well beyond what is required by law.

Valdespino

Jerez, Spain

The origins of this historic bodega date back to 1264 when Don Alfonso Valdespino was one of 24 Knights responsible for expelling the Moors from Jerez. As a reward for his efforts the king gave him land grants in the city of Jerez and thus began Bodegas Valdespino. The heart of Valdespino is its vineyards. They are the only sherry house to make a series of wines from a single vineyard. That vineyard, Macharnudo, is one of the “grand crus” of Jerez, located at the highest altitude and on pure Albariza soils (bright white chalk). All Valdespino wines are fermented with wild yeast in aged oak botas. Valdespino is also one of a few estates that take the solera system to the extreme going way beyond DO minimum regulations for all the categories. As an example Fino sherry is required to have 2 criaderas (nursery levels of the solera) and the DO average tends to be 3 – Valdespino’s Fino Inocente has 10 Criaderas!

Boundary Breaks

Finger Lakes, NY

Boundary Breaks, located on the east side of Seneca Lake, is emerging as one of the Finger Lake's top producers. In 2007, the owner, Bruce Murray, purchased a 120-acre farm that had been in the same family since 1850. Murray’s goal was to develop a vineyard that could yield Finger Lakes Rieslings that were comparable to some of the great Rieslings of Germany and Alsace. He produces wines made with great precision and freshness from all estate vineyards. This new project has become a revelation in the region and helped redefine the potential in the Finger Lakes AVA.

One of the original producers in the Polaner Selections portfolio, Elke Vineyards creates elegant, age-worthy Pinot Noir from their family-owned vineyards in California’s premiere Anderson Valley. Regarding vinification, Elke practices what can best be described as natural with as little "manipulation" as possible to allow the nuance of the fruit to shine through. Mary Elke tells it best: “There’s a balance in both life and wine that I try to reflect in the vineyard. My Pinot Noir has complexity and a vibrancy that shows off its terroir in the Anderson Valley. Our Donnelly Creek Vineyard is proof of something I never thought I’d see out here in the rural countryside: location, location, location.”

Hailed by many critics as some of the greatest value wines money can buy, Foxglove is a project of Bob and Jim Varner of Varner Wines in the Santa Cruz Mountains. Beginning with their first vintage in 1991, Bob sourced fruit from a variety of places in the Central Coast to create wines that are giving and fruit forward but maintain a fresh, acidic balance. The freshness is highlighted with little or no use of oak, and minimal intervention. The Foxglove wines are perfect everyday wines made with the same care and dedication as Varner estate wines.

Varner and Neely

Santa Cruz Mountains, CA

Practicing Organic

In 1980, twin brothers Jim and Bob Varner began their labor of love when they planted Spring Ridge Vineyards in Portola Valley in the northern part of the Santa Cruz Mountain Appellation. They produce wine for their Varner label from here, as well as Neely, a joint-venture between the Varners and Dr. Neely, the owner of Spring Ridge. This hillside vineyard is made up of several separate blocks of vines, each with its own microclimate and soil. Bob and his vineyard crew work in the rows both prior and during each harvest, insuring that meticulous sorting is done on the vine rather than at the winery. In the cellar, the wine is treated as naturally as possible, using indigenous yeast and malolactic bacteria from the vineyard. Rather than fining and filtering, the barrels are hand-racked, using a fontaine d'aspiration from Burgundy and a hand-cranked barrel lifting device.

Calera

Mt. Harlan, CA

Certified Organic

Calera is one of the greatest benchmarks in the world of California wines. Owner and winemaker Josh Jensen was cut his teeth in Burgundy at DRC and Dujac prior to founding Calera in 1975. He planted his first vineyards using selected cuttings from Burgundy; and subsequent vineyards are created from massale selections from the older plots. The estate is Certified Organic, founded on limestone-based soils at 2,000-2,500 ft. elevations on Mt. Harlan, located 25 miles east of Monterey Bay. The winemaking at Calera is non-interventionist: Grapes are all hand-harvested and then gravity-fed into 25% new oak barrels for the whites and open top fermenters for reds. For the Pinot Noirs, the must is vinified with whole-clusters with 100% natural yeasts and minimal racking. The wines are fined and filtered only when necessary. Calera’s Central Coast wines are produced with a similar philosophy as the Estate wines, including indigenous yeasts, 100% barrel fermentation and sur-lie aging for Chardonnay, and partial de-stemming on the Pinot.

Idlewild

Mendocino, CA

Idlewild Wines is a dream realized by Sam Bilbro. Sam grew up in a wine making family, and has worked all aspects of the trade from sales, to vineyard work and winemaking, at his father’s winery, Marietta Cellars. He has also worked in the restaurant trade which has broadened his appreciation for wines from outside his native California. Sam started Idlewild as an opportunity to produce wines from numerous places and varietals that inspire and excite him. Whether it’s Dolcetto, Cortese, Carignan or Arneis, the hallmarks of Idlewild Wines are their transparency of place and varietal, combined with charm and elegance. An exciting addition to the new California wine scene!

Limerick Lane

Russian River Valley, CA

Limerick Lane is a 30 acre property located just south of Healdsburg in the northeast corner of Russian River Valley AVA. Like many historic vineyards in the Russian River, Limerick Lane was originally planted in 1910 by Italian immigrants, the Del Fava family, and today is considered one of the top sites for Zinfandel in all of Sonoma County. The winery is now owned and run by 2nd generation winemakers, Jake and Scot Bilbro, sons of Chris Bilbro of Marietta Cellars fame.

Bedrock

Sonoma, CA

Morgan Twain-Peterson and Chris Cottrell are the brains and energy behind Bedrock which has quickly become one of the most influential new California wineries. Morgan, the son of the famed Joel Peterson of Ravenswood Winery, was raised with wine as part of his life, and has developed an encyclopedic knowledge of vineyards and wine making. The inspiration for many of the Bedrock bottlings are old-vine vineyards planted centuries ago by early immigrants to California. It's these vineyards that Morgan refers to as the "constellation of viticultural riches that allows Bedrock Wine Co. to craft its diverse range of wines." Given the limitations with many of these old-vine sites, production is limited.

Grassi

Napa Valley, CA

Founded by Mark and Jami Grassi in 2001, Grassi Wines are produced from a small estate vineyard that was once a riverbed in the Atlas Peak AVA of Napa Valley. Mark Grassi is originally a builder by trade. His company is responsible for the construction of many wineries in the valley and is known for their green building techniques and outstanding craftsmanship. With the help of Harlan vineyard manager Mary Maher and Peter Franus of Franus Wines, their first Cabernet vines were planted in 2002. Peter Franus made the first vintages (2005-2008), and as of 2009, Robbie Meyer of Peirson-Meyer took over the winemaking responsibilities. With the help of his daughter Cassandra, Grassi Wine Company has become a go to producer for quality and balanced Napa Valley wines.

Peirson Meyer

Napa Valley, CA

Peirson Meyer is a joint ventures between winemaker Robbie Meyer and Alan Peirson, who together spent a total of 25 years helping Peter Michael Winery become one of California’s most renowned producers. In 2001, the project started under the name L’Angevin, but has since evolved into what is now Peirson Meyer to reflect the two families who make the wines. They craft the wines with artisanal Burgundian techniques: natural yeast fermentation, 100% malolactic fermentation, extended aging on lees (15-16 months) in French oak, and unfined/unfiltered bottling.

Arnot-Roberts

Sonoma, CA

Practicing Organic

Arnot-Roberts Wines is a joint project of school-hood friends Duncan Arnot Meyers and Nathan Lee Roberts. Their goal is to make classically styled wines that express the uniqueness and beauty of their variety and location. Before starting their winery in 2002, they both worked many years at some of California's greatest wineries. The duo has an uncanny ability to ferret out distinctive and often extreme vineyard sites among cooler coastal areas spanning the Santa Cruz Mountains up to Mendocino county. The resulting wines push the limits of what California wines can be. The hard work and dedication paid off as they were named "Winemakers of the Year" in the San Francisco Chronicle for 2012. Gemstone

Napa Valley, CA

Practicing Organic

The Gemstone vineyard is comprised of nineteen micro-blocks planted to 5 clones of Cabernet Sauvignon, 2 clones of Merlot, 2 clones of Cabernet Franc, and 1 of Petite Verdot. The plantings were done with a variety of rootstocks carefully matched to the soils. Each micro-block is meticulously farmed, vinified separately, and later blended to create the final wine. Anything that does not make the ruthless first selection is blended into the second wine, Gemstone Estate Red, or sold off in bulk. The result is a wine of the highest quality each year, with a true Gemstone vineyard “signature”. In 2005, Philippe Melka, one of Napa Valley’s best known consulting winemakers, became winemaker for Gemstone wines.

Thomas Fogarty & Lexington

Santa Cruz Mountains, CA

After falling in love with the wines of Burgundy, Dr. Thomas Fogarty, a Stanford Cardiovascular Surgeon and world-renowned inventor, planted what are now the winery estate vineyards starting in 1978. The Winery Estate includes eight micro-vineyards covering 25 acres of ridge top and steep southeast- and east-facing hillsides on the property. In addition to the Winery Estate property, the Fogarty’s planted Gist Ranch Estate atop a ridge at 2300 feet above sea level in 1999. The 100-acre parcel located 17 miles south of the winery and 14.5 miles from the Pacific Ocean that is planted to Bordeaux varietals featured under the Lexington label. Now under the guidance of Tommy Fogarty Jr, and Winemaker Nathan Kandler, Thomas Fogarty Winery is producing wines with layers of complexity, energy and restraint that epitomize the greatness of the Santa Cruz Mountains terroir.

Donkey & Goat

North Coast, CA

Practicing Organic

Donkey & Goat is a partnership between husband and wife, Jared and Tracey Brandt. It all started with a bottle of Eric Texier Chateauneuf du Pape which then led to time in France with Eric learning how to make wines of similar balance in California. The grapes are primarily sourced from Mendocino and El Dorado Counties, and are mainly Rhone varietals along with some Pinot Noir and Chardonnay. As for the winemaking, it is less about what they do and more about what they don’t do. No cultured yeasts, no enzymes or nutrients, no machines for crushing, no new oak, and even no plastic used in the winemaking process. The resulting wines are beautifully transparent with freshness and purity that pair extremely well with a variety of foods.

Leo Steen

Sonoma, CA

Leo Hansen was born and raised in Denmark. Having caught the wine bug, Leo came to the United States in 1999 to check out the food and wine scene, and never went back! He migrated to the Sonoma wine country, and worked first as a waiter and sommelier and later as an assistant winemaker at Stuhmuller winery. There he started making a bit of his own wine starting in 2004, a bone dry Chenin Blanc under the name Leo Steen. Steen is both a family name and the South African word for Chenin Blanc. Leo’s Chenin comes from a 30+ year old vineyard in Dry Creek Valley planted in extremely stony soils in an old riverbed. The wine is fermented in stainless steel tanks, and then ages for 3-4 months in neutral barrels, with only about 20-25% malolactic completed.

Radio-Coteau & County Line

Sonoma, CA

Certified Biodynamic

Radio-Coteau works closely with select cool-climate coastal vineyard sites in Western Sonoma County and Anderson Valley to offer wines with vibrant, balanced fruit and a distinct sense of place. To craft unique expressions of sites and seasons, they focus on detailed and sustainable viticulture in conjunction with a natural, non-interventionalist approach in the cellar. They actively collaborate with their growers to enhance the character of each site by promoting vine balance and healthy soil.

County Line is produced by winegrower Eric Sussman of Radio-Coteau. This is a small line of pocket-friendly Pinot Noir and Rosé that are sourced from cool-climate sites in northern California.

Rivers-Marie

Sonoma, CA

Practicing Organic

Rivers-Marie is the personal project of Thomas Rivers Brown, one of California’s most heralded winemaker/Consultants, along with his long time partner Genevive (who’s middle name is Marie). While Thomas makes mostly Cabernet based wines as consultant/ winemaker for labels such as Shraeder, Outpost and Maybach, it’s the Rivers-Marie label where Thomas expresses a more delicate and restrained style of winemaking that’s inspired by his true love for traditional Burgundy and Barolo.

What started as a very small project to feed a passion for coastal Pinot Noir has grown to include several single vineyard sights such as Occidental Ridge, Willow Creek, Silver Eagle and the legendary Summa vineyard which Thomas and Genevive purchased in 2010. There is also a blended Sonoma Coast Pinot Noir, In addition to Pinot, Thomas makes small amounts of Cabernet and Chardonnay as well. Extremely Limited.

Wenzlau

Santa Rita Hills, CA

Practicing Biodynamic

Wenzlau is a family project in the Santa Rita Hills appellation of Santa Barbara County. The Wenzlau family are wine lovers who followed their dream to create classic wines inspired by the great wines of the world. To help them achieve their goal they enlisted Justin Willett of Tyler wines who is one of the most talented young winemakers in the area. Their inaugural vintage was met with great accolades. The new release of the 2012 shows their dedication to raising their bar and quality. We are excited to be partnered with this inspiring project.

Practicing Organic

The name for Ryme came from the first letters of Ryan and Megan Glaab. Their label started with a love of wine and one ton of Aglianico from Paso Robles. They have since expanded their lineup to include Ribolla Gialla, Fiano, Cabernet Franc as well as two Vermentinos: for ‘His’, he likes skin contact, and for ‘Hers’, she prefers fresh and clean. They have since expanded their offerings to include a few single vineyard Pinot Noirs.

Kongsgaard

Napa Valley, CA

Practicing Organic

After 20 years of winemaking in the Napa Valley, John Kongsgaard launched his own brand of Chardonnay with the 1996 vintage. As former winemaker for Newton Vineyards, John had already become well known for creating California’s first unfiltered Chardonnay. Since then, he and his wife Maggy have added Syrah, Cabernet Sauvignon, Albarino and a Viognier-Roussanne blend to their portfolio of wines. The core of their endeavor is the ten acre vineyard planted on a rocky hilltop in southeast Napa Valley which has belonged to the Kongsgaard family since the 1920’s. In the 70’s, John and Maggy planted eight acres to Chardonnay, adding an acre of Roussanne and Viognier in 1995 and the final acre of Cabernet Sauvignon in 2001 (which had its first crop in 2004). The Kongsgaards have also begun harvesting fruit at their property on Atlas Peak in Southern Napa. These holdings are complemented by grapes purchased from some of California’s top grape growers. Drinkward Peschon

Napa Valley, CA

Lisa Drinkward and Francoise Peschon were introduced to each other by their children and became fast friends. They, in fact, liken their philosophy about wine to their philosophy of raising children, and named their wine “Entre Deux Meres” (between two mothers, in this case), “Give them a lot of tender loving care, nurture always, then let them go on to express themselves and become the unique individuals they were meant to be.” They believe that gentle handling and minimalist intervention yields unique wines that are elegant and balanced -- a true expression of the roots. Sapere Aude & Lola

Sonoma, CA

Sapere Aude comes to us from the winemaker at LOLA, Seth Cripe. The phrase means “dare to know” in Latin and is meant to inspire enlightenment and trying something new. This is tasty, fresh sparkling wine for the people!

LOLA was started by Seth Cripe with the idea of making high-quality, honest, value oriented wines from California. Seth had worked previously at some of California’s top wineries, including Caymus and Swanson. What he envisioned with Lola was a line of wines that are made in a cleaner fresher style than most other California wines in these price categories. He has certainly achieved that! LOLA is the name of Seth's small, grey, fluffy dog that he rescued in the mountains above the California coast.

Cultivar

Sonoma, CA

The passion behind Cultivar is to produce Napa Valley Sauvignon Blanc and Cabernet from selected vineyard sources throughout the valley that have depth of character, while still remaining approachable and affordable. They are able to achieve their objective by combining a base of wine crafted from several choice, contracted vineyards along with other small lots of finished wine that are sourced from their boutique neighbors in the Valley. The winery also produces small lots of single-vineyard Napa Cabernets, parts of which find their way into the base Napa blend.

Locations and Orin Swift

North Coast, CA

The wines of Dave Phinney and Orin-Swift Cellars capture the imagination unlike almost any we know. They are unapologetically full-flavored and intense, yet with a backbone of structure that holds it all in place. Dave is not afraid to mix vineyards, varietals and even appellations to create the desired alchemy for each and every wine. He is ultra strict with his selection, however, and will always de-classify a wine or even skip a release entirely if it is not up to his standards.

For his Locations project, Dave found inspiration from the license plates of Europe to create an international brand that crosses borders, varietals and regions. The wines feature provincial character combined with individual personality. [NY only]

Sean Minor Wines and Point North

California & Oregon

Sean Minor has been in the wine business for 20+ years, starting at Beaulieu Vineyards and then moving to Oregon to run King Estate and Benton Lane wineries. He returned to California to oversee Renwood Winery and started his own label in 2005.

The wines are made under two tiers - 4 Bears Winery (which refers to Sean's four children) and the Sean Minor tier. The 4 Bears wines represent great values and are made from broader appellations such as Sonoma and Central Coast. The Sean Minor wines are from sought after appellations such as Carneros and Napa while still representing great value. In 2012 Sean decided to go back to his roots in Oregon to craft a Pinot Noir from this unique and special viticultural region.

Eyrie

Willamette Valley, OR

Practicing Biodynamic

Eyrie Vineyards is one of the original historic wine estates in Oregon and by all accounts one of the most historic in this country. Eyrie Vineyards was officially founded by David and Diana Lett in 1966 when they planted their vineyards in the Red Hills of Dundee, about 30 miles SW of Portland. The winery was built in nearby McMinnville and the first vintage was 1970. Just five years later, in 1975, Eyrie produced the first American Pinot noir to compete successfully with the renowned Pinot Noirs of Burgundy (Paris,1979; Beaune, 1980). The style at Eyrie is about purity and finesse. The vineyards are farmed organically. Wines are fermented with native yeasts, aged in minimal new wood and bottled without fining and minimal filtration. This gentle treatment creates wines which are very approachable when young but also capable of aging for decades.

Johan Vineyards

Willamette Valley, OR

Certified Biodynamic

Johan Vineyards was founded in 2004 when Norwegian immigrant Dag Johan Sunby came to Oregon’s Willamette Valley. His goal was to integrate natural farming methods with a refined, Burgundian-inspired winemaking approach in order to produce the highest quality wines from this terroir. The vineyard is located in the Eola-Amity Hills and is situated in the Van Duzer corridor, a coastal wind funnel that provides a cooling influence to the vines. The winemaker at Johan is Dan Rinke who previously worked at Rhys in California. The wines are made with native fermentations and a limited use of new French oak. Because of the long, cooler growing season at the site they get very good lignification of the stems and therefore utilize a good percentage of whole cluster in the winemaking as well. The resulting wines are precise, with beautiful purity, very savory elements and moderate alcohols.

Holloran and Stafford Hill

Willamette Valley, OR

Practicing Organic & Biodynamic

Located in Oregon’s Willamette Valley, Holloran is a small production winery focusing on Pinot Noir, Chardonnay, and Riesling. Owner Bill Holloran and winemaker Mark Lagasse practice organic and biodynamic farming and a light-handed approach in the cellar. Nearly all the wines are vineyard-designated, and many of the holdings are 20-30 years in age. They are typically bottled unfined and unfiltered to preserve their individual character and flavor. And don't miss Holloran's "second label" called "Stafford Hill." Unlike most second wines, it is made from de-classified barrels from Holloran's estate production. An amazing value!

J.K. Carriere

Willamette Valley, OR

Practicing Organic

Jim Prosser established J.K. Carriere in 1999. His incredible diverse background (from finance to the Peace Corps to winemaking stints around the world including Domaine Roumier for the '98 harvest) has given him a worldly approach to winemaking. When Jim started, the predominant style of winemaking in Oregon was slowly becoming bigger and more exuberant. But Jim felt that the great promise of Oregon lied in crafting balanced, tensile Pinot Noir from cooler sites. Not surprisingly, he employs a very hands off approach to winemaking including native yeasts for primary and secondary fermentations and the judicious use of oak. The resulting wines, from his blended wines all the way to his single vineyard pinots, all show elegance and earthy refinement as well as an ability to age and improve in the bottle.

Fleur de California & Mahoney Vineyards

Carneros, CA

With an enthusiasm for the red wines of Burgundy and confidence in California's potential for producing world-class wines, Francis & Kathy Mahoney have realized a dream: growing fine Burgundian Pinot Noir in the Northern California soil and climate in Carneros. On a modest budget, a small, functional winery was built in 1972 called Carneros Creek. Years later, Francis divested himself from Carneros Creek and started Mahoney Vineyards and Fleur de California. Both projects combined his passion for Burgundy with his extensive knowledge of the Carneros terroir. Together with winemaker Ken Foster, Francis has expanded focus of his various projects to include Petite Sirah from the Central Coast, and Chardonnay, Vermentino, and other Italian varieties from Carneros.

Powers Winery

Columbia Valley, WA

Practicing Organic

Since 1982, Powers Family Winery has selected grapes from some of the finest vineyards in Washington State’s Columbia Valley. Winemaker Greg Powers oversees the grapes from vine to bottle, producing wines of character and distinction. Powers wines have been recognized by such notables as the Wine Spectator, which has referred to the winery as a “rising star”. The Wine Enthusiast also named Powers Family Winery as one of the “50 Great U.S. Cabernet Producers.”

Pedras is an award winning naturally sparkling, natural mineral water from the deepest mountains of Pedras Valley. It was officially named Pedras in 1871 and til this day remains untouched by man with no artificial carbonation, making it extremely rare. Pedras is defined by the exemplary balance of what is pure and genuine: the perfect bubble, the unique mineral composition and a distinctive taste. Some top chefs from around the world say that Pedras boasts the ability to enhance the flavor of food. Others say it is the perfect transposition between flavors. The fact is Pedras has placed first amongst sparkling waters due to its unique natural properties, refined flavor and natural gas.

New York, NY 10011

Founded in Manhattan in 1996 as a little cafe space near Union Square--that's still known simply as 71 Irving Place--Irving Farm Coffee Roasters has since grown to include relationships with coffee producers the world over, a roasting facility in the Hudson Valley, and some of the most well respected wholesale partners in the region. Not long after founders David Elwell and Steve Levin created their dream cafe, they realized that in order to fulfill their desire for a craft-focused, hands-on approach to their love of coffee, they'd simply have to roast it too.

In 1999, they transformed an old dairy farm in the Hudson Valley into a roasting facility. The country roastery and the city cafe meet in our name: Irving Farm. Set at the foot of the Catskills and the Berkshires, our base in the historic Coleman Station district near the town of Millerton is the same region whose lush dairy farms were once the main supplier of milk to New York City in the 1800s.

Nowadays, Irving Farm supplies our carefully sourced, handcrafted coffees to two beautiful cafes in Manhattan, as well as our coffee house in Millerton, keeping the focus on sustainability and building direct relationships with the coffee farmers who grow the beautiful coffees that both the country and the city love so much.
